complied with.

This, of course, led to frequent complaints, and many attempts had been made to clear them out.

But there were difficulties in the way.

Hangman's Hollow was private property, and the local authorities had no control over it. It happened to belong to the Hon. Ralph Ardoise—the "Gipsy Squire," as he was called—and for some reason best known to himself—or perhaps from sheer perverseness—he chose to tolerate these vagrants upon his land; and, being a magistrate, he managed very often to get their misdeeds very lightly punished, and frequently passed over altogether.

It was towards this spot of unsavoury repute that Slimy Sam now bent his steps.

The object of his visit was very peculiar, and would have made Tinker change his plans for that afternoon, if only he had but a hint
